

I can finally eat my dinner in peace. Not be awakened during an afternoon nap after working all night at the local rescue squad. Thank goodness for the law(s) that have afforded me my personal space back and protected me from constant intrusion.

I wish for the New Jersey "Do Not Call" program to stand strong and not be diluted because of Big Business wanting an inexpensive and intrusive means of entering into everyone's personal sanctuary, their home; or interfering with the small business owner, whose every minute of the 10 - 12 hour days are so valuable.

In the construction trade we are given standards, or building codes, that set the minimum standard to be met, but we as builders are free to choose even higher standards by which we choose to meet.

Let the Federal "Do Not Call" laws set the minimum -- not the one and only standard by which a state can help protect its citizens.
